FOOD ALLERGY DIETS

Your vet has suggested that your pet may benefit from a diet, to help manage your pet's food allergy – here is how diet can help.

To help deal with a food allergy you want to avoid feeding the problem ingredients.

Food allergy diets contain very few ingredients, reducing the risk of giving them one of the problem ingredients. They also contain either unusual ingredients, that are less likely to trigger a reaction, or hydrolysed proteins, where the protein molecules are cut into small pieces so the body will not recognise and react to it.

SPECIFIC food allergy diets use hypoallergenic ingredients egg and rice in the dry diets and lamb and rice in the wet diets. The hydrolysed diets use hydrolysed salmon protein and rice.
